The southernmost tip of Africa, official meeting place of the Atlantic and Indian oceans, is a place of rugged beauty with rich cultural and natural heritage. Come and unwind in the splendid isolation of Agulhas National Park amidst the sound of crashing waves, the scent of fynbos and sheer magic of the location.

2.5 hours drive from Cape Town.
This windswept, ruggedly beautiful coastal plain at the southernmost tip of Africa was proclaimed as the Agulhas National Park on the 23rd of September 1999. The park started as a 4 ha portion of land at the southern tip and has since grown to an area of 20 369 ha.

2.5 Hours drive from Cape Town, Agulhas National Park offers a unique getaway with its incredible natural offering, cultural heritage and fascinating history. This park has some of the largest extent of indigenous fynbos, as well as renatured sand dunes in the area. It has approximately 2000 species of indigenous plants and the coastline supports a rich marine and terrestrial life, with brooding sites of rare coastal birds such as the African black oystercatcher in spring and early summer. Southern Right whales frequent the coastline, which is also dotted with numerous shipwrecks of brave early explorers.

Many national monuments are found in the area, such as the historical Cape Agulhas Lighthouses, which has been in operation since 1848. A reconnaissance of the area has also established the presence of significant archaeological sites along the coast. The discovery of stone hearths and pottery, together with shell middens, hints at the archaeological deposits with the era of Khoisan migration and settlement.
