

As he walked through the savannah, Chameleon admired his skin as it frequently changed colour. It changed from bright green to mottled colours and then to bright green again. Chameleon wasn't in a hurry. He was enjoying himself along the way. As he passed what is today known as Orpen Dam, he saw a beautiful Euphorbia growing on the opposite bank. A hippo frightened him with a submerged grunt!

