YOUR NATURAL HERITAGE
Marakele National Park

“Place of Sanctuary”

Setting foot in Marakele, right in the heart of the Waterberg mountains, allows one to discover a park like no other. “A place of sanctuary” is indeed what is to be expected, just like the Tswana name suggests, for this national park is located in the transitional zone between the dry western and moister eastern regions of South Africa, therefore allowing for a remarkable mixture of wildlife. A moderate and pleasant climate ensures an enjoyable stay, with perfect summer rainfalls keeping the worst of heat at bay. Visitors flocking here can expect a welcoming mixture of tranquility, delight and overall satisfaction – and the picturesque paradise in which the park is set forms just part of the promise. Rare yellowwood and striking cedar trees, long and luscious bushveld and grandiose mountains in the background, huge crowds of Cape vultures soaring through the royal blue skies, exciting mixtures of wildlife trampling across the plains ... Certainly a bush experience unlike any other.

Tlopi Tented Camp

Guests get to relax in comfortably furnished tented units while gazing across the banks of the Apiesrivierpoort Dam. Each tent has two beds (two stretchers are available which are more suitable for children) and a private bathroom (shower, wash basin and toilet). A fully equipped kitchen, complete with a refrigerator/freezer, two-plate stove and electricity, ups the luxury level. Guests can also lazily enjoy each tent’s veranda with table, deck chairs and barbeque facilities. One tent offers wheelchair access. The unfenced camp allows for a more “environmental” camping experience, and is approximately 17 km from the Reception Office.
Bontle Camping Site

It’s no coincidence that bontle means ‘beautiful’ in Tswana. This pleasant camping site consists of 38 camp sites with power points, arranged into 3 clusters, with one communal block per cluster.

The camping site is located adjacent to the park’s new reception and administration offices.

Flora and Fauna

Game

Your typical African bush mammals can be found throughout Marakele, and visitors can expect to see beauties such as elephant, black and white rhino. Predator types like brown hyena, leopard and lion can also be spotted, as well as antelope such as sable, impala, waterbuck and many other smaller species. Guests are advised to take note of chacma baboons and vervet monkeys, who are known for their mischievous actions, particularly around the rest camps.

Birding

A stunning appeal of Marakele is the world’s largest colony of Cape Vultures. More than 800 breeding pairs have made the park their home and visitors are definitely sure to catch a glimpse of a few of them. However, because of the park’s location within a transition zone between the dry western regions and the moister eastern regions of the country, an interesting variety of birdlife can be encountered (closely related species and mixed). Typical birds of this region include Southern Boubou, Red-eyed Bulbul, Purple Roller, Cape Rock Thrush, raptors such as Snake and Brown Snake Eagle, Jackal Buzzard, African Hawk, and many others. In summer, Wahlberg’s Eagle are prominent. Night time brings its own special mix like Freckled and Fiery-necked Nightjars, Spotted Eagle and African Scops Owl to add to the pulsating mix of crickets and cicadas. Marakele Honorary Rangers have organised an annual birding census in the park and surrounding farms, keeping track of these magnificent companions.

Vegetation

More than half the park is characterized by the Waterberg Moist Bushveld vegetation type, which occurs in the intermediate to high lying areas in the southern and south-eastern parts of the park. Another major vegetation type is the Mixed Bushveld, which covers approximately 42% of the park. This vegetation type is mainly found in the north-western and isolated south-western park areas. Game such as black rhino, elephant and wild dog are associated with this vegetation type. This vegetation type is characterized by species such as silver cluster leaf (Terminalia sericea), sickle bush (Dichrostachys cinerea) and round-leaved teak (Pterocarpus rotundifolias). This picturesque vegetation can also be seen around the camping site and tented camp.

Isn’t this fun? Seeing all the exciting birds here in Marakele National Park?

No, this is boring. We should have gone to the snake park instead. Why couldn’t Milo come along?

No, that’s a Cape Vulture.

Are you sure? Is it not an eagle?

No, that’s something gross about vultures, son. Remember the circle of life talk we had?

You mean those birds that feed off dead bodies? Gross!

Yes, yes. I think we’d better go. Those vultures might mistake us for a snack.

Wow, that’s a big bird. Is it on eagle?

No, that’s a Cape Vulture.

There’s nothing gross about vultures, son. Remember the circle of life talk we had?

You mean those birds that feed off dead bodies? Gross!

Yes, yes.

You know dogs are not allowed in national parks … Shh!

Well, then you’ll remember that all animals are important, even vultures, for the circle of life. And they are very interesting creatures.

Eish. That’s quite slow. No wonder they wait for their food to die first!

Did you know that they can fly at 50km an hour and that they can live for up to 25 years?

Uh, mom? I think we’d better go. Those vultures might mistake us for a snack.

MELUSI AND MILO
Marakele’s Cape Vultures

Melusi and his dog Milo (SANParks unofficial envoys of conservation and biodiversity) are always keen to teach about the importance of nature.

Here Melusi visits Marakele and learns a valuable lesson about one of its main attractions - the vultures.
